The cutoff range is the same in 6-max and 9-max, and that is not laziness — it is a consequence of what actually matters preflop. What determines your opening range is not how many players are at the table, it is how many are still to act. From the CO there are exactly three: the button and the two blinds. Everyone in front has already folded, so a 9-handed CO and a 6-handed CO face an identical decision.

The practical change from the hijack is that you now steal profitably with hands that have no showdown value at all. 96s, 85s and 64s go in because when the button and blinds fold — which happens often enough — you win the pot uncontested, and when they call you have a hand that flops draws and can barrel. The offsuit additions (A7o, A6o, K9o, Q9o, J9o, T9o) sit in the mixed band and should be dropped first against a 3-betting button.

The most common mistake in the cutoff is opening the full 38% into a button who 3-bets aggressively. Against that player, the honest fix is to cut to about 29% (the core band) rather than to open wide and then fold to every 3-bet.
