Eight big blinds is deep in shove territory. A standard 2.2bb open commits over a quarter of your stack, and you have no fold equity left on the flop, so raising small only turns a clean all-in into a mess. Jamming instead means every fold you get wins you the blinds outright, and every call gives you two live cards and no further decisions to get wrong.

The shape of the range is driven almost entirely by how many players are left to act. UTG has eight of them and jams 18%. The small blind has one and jams 76% — far wider than the button — because the only hand that can call is the big blind's, and the big blind must fold a lot to a shove for one blind of dead money.

The EV column is the part worth studying. Hands hovering between +0.00 and +0.05bb are the ones that decide almost nothing: shove them or fold them, the long-run difference is a rounding error. The hands worth memorising are the ones just below zero, because those are the jams that feel right and quietly lose money.
